Conclusion

My one-week Generative AI classes with IBM have been such a wonderful and memorable experience for me. I’m genuinely happy that I got the chance to be a part of these classes. In just one week, I learned so many new things about Generative AI, including LLMs, RAG, and how AI actually works behind the scenes. These were things I had heard about before, but now I understand them much better.

What I enjoyed the most was getting to create my own website and chatbot. It was exciting to turn what I learned into something real and see how these tools can be used in everyday life. The classes were not just about listening and learning; they gave me a chance to try things myself, explore new ideas, and discover how much more there is to learn about AI.

Even though the classes lasted only a week, I feel like I gained so much knowledge, confidence, and inspiration. This experience made learning about technology more fun and made me curious to keep exploring and creating new things. I’m truly grateful to IBM and everyone who made this learning experience possible. I’m ending this week with a happy heart, lots of new knowledge, and memories I’ll always be glad to have. It was an amazing experience, and I’m so glad I got to be a part of it!
